VACCINATION POLICIES

Fecal Exams and Prevention Medications

The only worm prevention medications accepted by Furry Friends PATS in lieu of annual fecal tests or deworming are medications that are LABELED to prevent roundworms and hookworms. Some examples are Heartgard Plus, Iverhart Plus, Sentinel, Trifexis, Advantage Multi, and Revolution (cats only).

Annual fecal tests are still encouraged by Furry Friends (even if your pet is on one of these programs) because there are other health problems that can be detected with these tests. A positive result for non-contagious parasites may not disqualify the animal.

Flea prevention programs such as REVOLUTION, ADVANTAGE, PROGRAM, FRONT LINE, BIOSPOT, etc. do not prevent or kill roundworms, and hookworms. These types of worms can lie dormant in fecal for weeks or even months. Note that regular Heartgard kills only heartworm larvae and will not be accepted.

Distemper/Parvo or FVRCP

Every dog or cat must be either vaccinated for this, or, if deemed appropriate by the animal's veterinarian, protective titers will be accepted. Results of a titer test must be submitted annually, if used in place of vaccinations. In addition to the numeric results themselves, we require a signed letter from the veterinarian him/herself stating that he/she feels these values are adequate to provide immunity for a specified time period not to exceed one year. The signed letter can be mailed to Furry Friends, or it can be scanned and emailed.

Rabies

State law requires dogs and cats to be vaccinated against rabies, regardless of whether they are an indoor or outdoor pet. Titers will not be accepted for rabies.

Hookbills

Hookbills (parrots, parakeets, and cockatiels) can be used for PATS visits. These birds should be checked for Tuberculosis (TB) and have an elisa test for psittacosis. Although a fecal exam is not necessary, they are a valuable aid in maintaining healthy birds. Birds are not suggested for immuno-compromised clients unless there has been a bacterial culture on the choana and cloaca – found to be normal.

Leporidae

Annual fecal tests are required for all rabbits as other health problems can be detected from these tests.

Raw Diet

There is a higher risk for passage of pathogens (bacteria, viruses, or other microorganisms that cause disease) from animals to humans with pets fed raw diets due to under-cooked animal-source proteins. The food fed to our pet assisted therapy pets must reach a temperature of 165 degrees to ensure that pathogens and bacteria have been eliminated. The greatest risk are children, older people, and immuno-compromised individuals, so we must err on the side of caution and ask all of our members to refrain from feeding raw diets to their therapy pets for health and safety reasons.
